Man wanted locally, charged in Fla. murder

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

A Kentucky man who is wanted for sending life-threatening messages to a Grant County woman is in a Florida jail for allegedly killing a man with a hatchet.

Arthur DeCarvalho, 26, of Crescent Springs was arrested by the Pinellas County (Florida) Sheriff's Office on June 7.

He is charged with first-degree murder in the death of 50-year-old David Elsey.

When the crime occurred, DeCarvalho was wanted in Grant County after allegedly violating a domestic violence injunction when sending the mother of his child violent text messages.

DeCarvalho pled guilty in September 2013 to harassing communications, terroristic threatening, stalking and violation of an emergency protection order.

As part of his plea agreement, he was ordered not to have contact with the victim or have any new criminal offenses or he would have to serve his conditionally discharged sentence.

> "I look forward to killing you and watching your blood ooze out of your body. Watching the life leave your eyes as I stare at you and finally get to feel the satisfaction of getting revenge on you."
> - ARTHUR DECARVALHO
> wrote in a text to a Grant Co. woman

However, a motion to revoke DeCarvalho's discharged jail time was filed in Grant District Court on April 29 after text messages he sent to the victim came to light.

"I look forward to killing you and watching your blood ooze out of your body," the suspect allegedly texted to the victim. "Watching the life leave your eyes as I stare at you and finally get to feel the satisfaction of getting revenge on you. Hug (their daughter) goodbye because once I see you… You will never see her again. You will never breathe again."

Dry Ridge adds $40,000 to fire dept. budget

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

A week before the end of the 2013-14 fiscal year the Dry Ridge City Council approved amending the budget to add $40,000.

The additional funds were allocated to the Dry Ridge Fire Department, upping its appropriations for the year to $1.028 million.

Chief Tom Jump said before the first reading of the budget amendment that he did not intend to use all of the funds and any remaining would be put back in the city's general fund.

DID YOU KNOW?

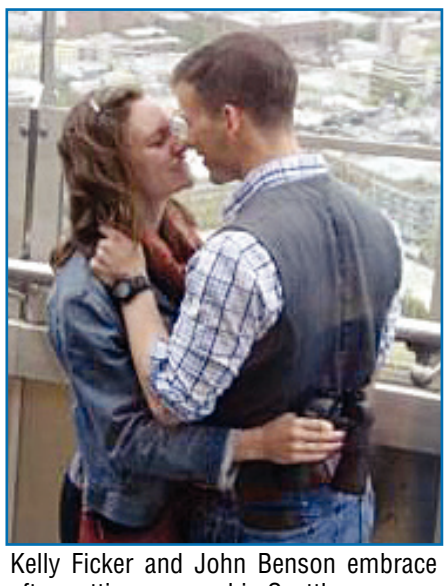

- Council members voted 4-2 to approve a budget amendment to add money to cover the last month of the fiscal year.

"We've been running on the same budget for the past four years," Jump said. "It's just gotten to the point where this year, with the price of things going up, where we didn't have enough."

The council voted 4-2 on June 23 in favor of the budget amendment with Fred Money, Scott Bates, Sara Cummins and Jim Hendy in favor and Carisa Hughett and Kenny Edmondson voting against the additional money.

"I am going to vote for this, but I am not happy with waiting until the last month to find out that we're going to be a little short," Money said. "It should have been done four months ago. We're at a point where we don't have any other choice. I think we should at least have a six-month sit-down with every department to see where our budget is running."

Kelly Ficker and John Benson embrace after getting engaged in Seattle.

WES student pen pals help bring Seattle couple together

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

A romance that sparked with the help of some Williamstown Elementary pen pals has led to the couple getting engaged.

When WES third grade teacher Michelle Whaley and RTI coordinator Carleen Ficker were looking for a group of soldiers to write to so they enlisted the help of Ficker's daughter, Kelly.

The 27-year-old Butler, Kentucky native who lives in Seattle, Washington recalled meeting Captain John Benson, 27, at a cancer fundraiser.

Kelly asked John if the students could write to the soldiers of the 4th Platoon, Centurion Company, based at Lewis-McChord Base in Seattle, Wash., while they were overseas in Afghanistan.

John happily agreed.

"It turned out it was very uplifting for the spirit of my men," he said.

MURDER

In the texts, the suspect also allegedly threatens to track down the victim and her mother, tie them up and rape them.

"I can bury you in a remote place in the desert," the text states.

DeCarvalho missed a court appearance in Grant County May 12 to answer for the alleged text messages.

In Florida, he was staying with Elsey, who DeCarvalho told police he met online.

DeCarvalho was stopped twice by officers June 7, once after being seen stumbling on Clearwater Beach and again after being discovered sleeping inside a truck registered to the victim.

When he was taken into custody after the second stop, the officer discovered a driver's license and about eight credit cards belonging to Elsey.

According to the Tampa Bay Times, the suspect told law enforcement he was not homosexual and was strictly using the murder victim for a place to stay.

Shortly afterward, the newspaper reports DeCarvalho admitted to deputies that he struck Elsey in the back of the head with a hatchet about 10 times.

The victim was found dead on his bed with his ankles and arms bound with a cord and a hatchet, measuring 18 to 24 inches long, near his body, according to the Tampa Bay Times.

COUPLE : WES students help

"The children of Williamstown supported us for three years through cards, care packages and cookies. Plus, it was a good way to keep in contact with Kelly."

With Kelly acting as the go between over the years, Benson finally visited the Williamstown students around Memorial Day in 2013 to thank them in person.

"We faced Afghanistan together with the support of the children from Williamstown," Kelly said. "I remember him telling me when you are over there you can always feel forgotten, but with the children's cards, care packages and cookies coming in we felt their love."

As the letters back and forth continued so did the relationship between Kelly and John.

The couple became engaged May 3 when John popped the question at the plaza level of the Space Needle in Seattle.

"He said he wanted to see all the sights before he left for airborne school," Kelly said. "We had not been to the top of the Space Needle yet. While we were at the top of the needle all my girlfriends and John's army buddies gathered at the bottom of the Needle with signs saying 'Kelly will you marry me?'

Kelly Ficker shows off her engagement ring after saying 'yes' to fiance John Benson's proposal.

She said yes.

Onlookers started clapping for the newly engaged couple and a random tourist even took photos to mark the occasion since the photographer John hired did not make it up in the elevator.

Kelly was greeted with a bouquet of flowers, along with hugs and kisses, from the couple's friends when they reached the bottom.

"After the first date with Kel, I knew she was the one," John said. "It just felt right. I knew what I wanted and she was it. She is the most non-judging person I know. She is always working on some community service project to benefit others."

Kelly describes John as "everything I ever wanted or was looking for."

"He is honest and caring and curious about the world around him," she said. "He's interested in making difference and still believes in others even after all he has seen in Afghanistan."

John said he is glad he agreed to the pen pal correspondence with the WES third graders that started it all.

"In their way, they brought Kelly and myself together almost as good as Hallmark," he said.

BUDGET

Hughett said council members should be updated more frequently about the financial status of each department in the city.

"That's why I think we should get monthly reports, itemized," she said. "I think if (Jump) was doing it correctly we wouldn't be in this position and he would have caught it a lot earlier."

The fire department's appropriations are approximately $352,000 more than the other five line items in the general fund budget combined.

"If you're going to operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week it takes a lot of money," said Cindy Harris. "That's why their budget is so much larger than streets and maintenance."

Although there was a shortfall for the fire department at the end of the current fiscal year, the 2014-15 budget included an increase for a total of $1.11 million in appropriations.

"If you don't vote to do anything, we have no other choice but to run out of money and lock the doors over there," Mayor Clay Crupper said before the first reading . "That's how simple it is."

AUTHOR: to visit library July 10

Castilllo has written 27 novels and has been the recipient of numerous awards including the Daphne du Maurier Award of excellence for excellence in Mystery/Suspense; the Holt Medallion for Best Romantic Fiction; the Golden Heart, which recognizes outstanding romance manuscripts; and a nomination for the prestigious Rita award, which recognizes outstanding published romance novels/novellas.

Growing up in a small farming community in Western Ohio she kept herself entertained by creating characters and making up stories. She would stay up late and write stories, leading her to write her first novel at age 13. She still has the manuscript.

"Okay it's pretty bad," she said. "But it was a tremendous and positive learning experience."

Castillo started out by writing romantic novels and won numerous awards but made the switch to murder mysteries by writing "Sworn to Silence", the first of the Kate Burkholder series, which was made into a movie.

"The idea of writing a big thriller has always appealed to me," Castillo said. "I was challenged to take my writing to another level and explore something new. The Kate Burkholder series appealed to me in particular because I wanted to explore her and find out what makes her tick. I wanted to learn more about her and tell her story. She's such an unusual heroine."

Castillo's newest book, "The Dead Will Tell" comes out July 8 and is the sixth book in the Kate Burkholder series.

The series is about Kate Burkholder who was born Amish, but left the fold after a traumatic event when she was a teenager. She fled her hometown for the big city only to return home years later when she was hired as the chief of police.

Castillo wanted a protagonist that could immerse readers in both the Amish world and the "English" world. She said that she was intrigued at introducing heinous crime into such a wholesome setting.

"I also wanted to explore the Amish culture, which is so rich in history and steeped in tradition—and sometimes secrets."

Castillo is currently working on two projects. She is finishing up the seventh book in the Kate Burkholder series, which will be released next summer, and her second is a standalone novel that is set in West Virginia and features a slightly shady female private detective who finds herself on the case of a lifetime with some personal connections.

The library is having this event in an effort to put reading and literacy back as a focus in the community.

"Literacy is so very important," Castillo said. "Not only is reading a wonderful adventure, but it's vital to a fulfilling, happy and productive life."

PERSONALLY SPEAKING

Going, going, gone fishing!

Jamie
BAKER-NANTZ
Editor

I just flipped the calendar over and bam, it hit me that it is July already!

I'm not sure what happened to May and June but they are in the history books now.

This has been a weird year in terms of weather. First, we had the winter that wouldn't end and then spring sprang and kept going and now it's officially summer.

As a kid, summer was always my favorite time of year, outside of birthdays and Christmas, because it was lazy. You didn't have to get up early for school or go to bed early for school and there was always something to do with your cousins or friends.

One of my favorite summer activities was and still is to spend an early morning or late afternoon sitting on a pond bank with a fishing pole in my hand.

I'm not still very often. My friends tell me I have trouble slowing down long enough to sit still, but fishing brings a sense of peace and calm to me. I don't mind baiting my own hook and I've even got OK with taking the hook from the fish's mouth. It's not that I'm afraid the fish will "bite" me but I got finned one day and still remember the sting.

My Aunt Lucy, who will turn 102 years old at the end of this month used to take me fishing all the time as a kid. We'd go to the "game farm" also known as Salatto Wildlife Area in Frankfort and fish for hours.

Last year, she called me up and said, "Jamie, I'm going to die and I'd like to go fishing again. Are you going to take me?"

Well, with a declaration like that there was no doubt I was taking her, so I took off early one summer afternoon and took her and my mom to a friend's pond in Williamstown.

We were able to drive right down to the lake and they had a dock with chairs on it that was perfect for the two of them.

No sooner than Aunt Lucy threw out her line, than she started landing bass. My mom hooked a catfish and I snagged a couple of good-sized blue gill.

The two of them had so much fun that they begged me to take them fishing again a couple days later so we went to another friend's pond to try our luck.

This is where the fish tale starts. My mom managed to snag a whooping catfish before I could even get my fishing pole out of the truck.

She's hollering for help, I'm running and hollering back for her to wait until I could get to her to help her land the monster.

I'm not sure where I get my lack of patience from, but mom, couldn't wait and began jerking on her line and poof, the catfish was gone just like he appeared.

We fished for a while and weren't getting many bites so I moved around the pond to try my luck in a new spot. That's when mom landed another, or maybe the same catfish, but he was a whopper.

Again, she couldn't wait for me to come huffing and puffing around the pond, not to mention I fell in a hole, to assist and this one got away again.

We still managed to catch enough in our two trips to have a delicious fish fry the next night.

Even if we hadn't caught anything, I would still treasure the memory because I spent it with the two women who've had the most influence on my life.

Aunt Lucy called the other day and said, "Jamie, when are you gonna take me fishing because I'm not getting any younger."

Vacation is the best medicine

Camille
MCCLANAHAN
Editorial Assistant

Recently, I traveled to Tennessee for the July 4th holiday to see many of my family members that I had lost touch with. I come from a huge family with my great grandmother having 16 children and my grandmother having six children.

It had probably been 10 years since I had seen most of these people. My Uncle Robbie always has a big get together on the lake.

This is the first year I had ever been. My family is rowdy, loud and can roll with the best of them and I love every minute of it. They are mine whether they like it or not.

Growing up I spent most summers at my cousin's house. Four boys among several other cousins they used to torture me until I would just about pee my pants. Now they have husband and wives and babies of their own that I have never met and they have never met mine.

I had realized for quite some time that I needed a vacation. I could feel it in my bones that I just needed to get away. I found myself being distracted and unfocused. Feeling burnt out is not a great feeling. Because I love what I do.

How many people can say that? Not too many that I know of. Just sometimes you need to get away from it all.

The closer the trip became the more excited I got. It had been so long since I had went home, too long. People are so caught with their lives before you know it six months have gone by and you haven't spoken to a soul. I'm guilty of that.

When my great grandmother was alive my family was close-knit and we saw each other on a regular basis.

Since her passing I feel things have fallen apart. Everyone has their own lives. Moved to different states and we don't try like we used to. I'm guilty of that too, not stopping to take the time.

A few months back my mamaw called me to ask if she had done something to offend me. Now how do you think that made me feel? About two-inches tall.

I realize she's getting older and won't be around forever and it will break my heart when something does happen.

When were kids we think our parents and grandparents are invincible. This is no different, I still think that way about my mamaw.

She is one of my biggest fans and she will always be my hero. She is always proud and loves me unconditionally. I had forgotten that.

This vacation is just what I needed. Time to get away, time to reflect and time to just be.

The mother and wife in me are so caught up being just that. I forget that there is so much more to me.

I like going to the lake and goofing off, sleeping in and lounging with family, riding 4-wheelers and horses and being outside. Just generally being a kid. I did just that and had a blast.

Every time I go home I feel a since of relief and peace come over me that is like any other. It's home, it's my roots and it is partly what made me who I am.

A WORD FROM OUR READERS...

Loretta Kelly had gift of compassion for students

The Grant County School system has lost one of its beloved retired staff members on June 15, 2014. Loretta Kelly taught at Dry Ridge Elementary for many years. She had a gift of compassion, which she shared with each child in her care. She treated her fellow faculty and staff members with respect and love. Many people throughout Grant County and beyond were blessed to have had Loretta Kelly not only as a teacher, but also as a friend. She will be truly missed.

DOWN AND DIRTY

Toads are a good sign of healthy enviroment

Lately it seems that everywhere I step in the yard, vegetable garden and perennial beds there is a toad under foot. They manage to jump out of harm's way (from a rapidly approaching foot or spade) just in the nick of time. When I notice healthy populations of a good insect, bug or amphibian I like to think that they are flourishing because of the ecological balance of the farm. Toads are an indicator species suggesting in their abundance that the environment is healthy; in their absence that it is not. They live both on land and in the water and are very sensitive to their surroundings because their amphibious skin absorbs pollutants and chemicals easily.

We use conventional and organic products on a very limited basis. We don't fertilize the lawn or utilize tilling equipment anymore; so it seems that reduced disturbance to the soil and the environment around the house and in the garden has paid off and allowed our toad population to flourish.

Toads do some great things out in the garden. They have an appetite for insects including flies, mosquitoes, gnats, snails, slugs, crickets, beetles, cutworms and earthworms (which I would rather they didn't). An American toad can consume over 80 flies in one minute, hundreds of cutworms in a summer and even more mosquitoes. They don't see well, only fast movements like that of a fly; they prefer to stay hidden in the soil, grass or mulch until twilight and if your cat eats one it will probably be sick for a day salivating excessively…but they sort of deserve it for eating a toad.

Toads are sign of good gardener

There is a farm pond on the property, which probably helps maintain my toad population, as well. Toads, since they are amphibious, must head back to the water in order to mate. Their young must spend their first few weeks in the water as eggs through the tadpole stage until they grow legs and hop on up to the house and vegetable garden. They will return to the same place for mating year after year. It has been noted that toads will travels up to three miles to return to their old stomping grounds, so to speak. Sometimes the male toad will hop on the back of the females for a free ride and perhaps a little foreplay. Old habits are hard to break, toads will even return to old mating ponds after they have dried up. That would be disappointing to find out at the last minute.

I remember years ago back in the vegetable garden we had a toad that was quite recognizable. Daddy had run over him with the lawn mower by accident and his back was cut. It healed but left a scar. We saw that toad for at least three seasons after back in the garden.

So, respect your toads and teach those who still view toads as creeping, wicked things otherwise. Let's help them shake the reputation that they hang out with witches all the time and cause warts. It's not true. They should be associated with the good gardener, perhaps perched on the shoulder like a parrot accompanying a most respected pirate.

FAITH & VALUES

VERSE OF THE WEEK:
"The Lord also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble."
Psalms 9:9 (KJV)

GRACE NOTES

New beatitudes

Perhaps one of the most poetic and familiar passages in the gospels is the beatitudes from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount.

Jesus gathered his disciples together to teach them and began by saying, "Blessed are the (fill in the blank)," and then told them why they were blessed.

For example, he said the poor in spirit are blessed because they would richly receive God's kingdom; those who mourn are blessed because they would be comforted. The merciful would be shown mercy and the pure of heart would see God. I have a few beatitudes of my own that I'd like to add to the list:

•Blessed are those who can sit still in a quiet room without a Tasmanian devil inside their brain making them crazy and upping their stress.

As I write this, the house is quiet. It's raining and there's thunder rumbling in the distance. It's a perfect time to be still and let God speak, but my mind won't let me. I'm thinking ahead to what needs to be done next week when what I should be thinking about is what God has done for me today.

Once I met a woman who lived in complete solitude – no radio, no TV. Her house was so silent you could hear her cat's soft paws treading on her tile floor. This woman spoke slowly. Quietly. Deliberately. Gently. Softly.

Drove me nuts! Come on, honey, pick up the pace, I wanted to say.

Seventeenth-century philosopher Blaise Pascal said that all human evil results from us not being able to sit still in a room. I don't know if that's true, but God once said – and still says – "Be still." He says, "In repentance and rest is your salvation. In quietness and trust is your strength" (Isaiah 30:15).

Grace Notes

I think the fear of stillness is the fear of hearing God speak, that he just might say I'm a disappointment. But that's a lie.

"There is therefore no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus" (Romans 8:1). Next time it's quiet maybe I'll sit still long enough to hear that.

•Blessed are the skeptics and doubters, for God seems to take great delight in surprising their socks off.

One of my favorite Bible people is Thomas, a disciple of Jesus who was a bit of a buzz kill. Nicknamed "Doubting Thomas," he tended to see the glass half-empty and expect the worst.

When the other disciples were giddy with the news that Jesus had risen from the dead, Thomas said he wouldn't believe it unless he could physically touch the Savior's wounds.

Poof! Jesus appeared to him and invited Thomas to take a poke. Jesus could've chastised him for not believing, but he didn't. He loved Thomas, despite his unbelief.

I totally get Thomas. Even though I've written two books on prayer, I truly don't believe God answers my prayers – and then he goes and does and I'm left sockless and filled with awe. Each time that happens I'm humbled and amazed and a little bit ashamed to realize afresh how kind and merciful God is to me.

•Blessed are the truly contrite, for God shall make them LOL, or at least grin like a Cheshire cat.

I firmly believe that only those who know and are well-acquainted with the depth of their sin and the extent of their unrighteousness can fully appreciate the greatness and the magnitude of God's grace and forgiveness. If you only see yourself as a small sinner, God's grace is small, too, and what joy is there in that? But for those who see themselves as great sinners, there's no better reason to laugh -- the laughter of the forgiven and redeemed.

We have a saying around my church: Cheer up! You're a lot worse than you think. But God's grace is a lot greater than you can even imagine. Blessed are those who know it.
